Black/Dark Solid Coloured Engineered Quartz Waiver

By signing this waiver I agree and understand the problems that could possibly arise by purchasing a black/dark solid coloured engineered quartz.

- Most commonly, you will see finger/hand prints left on the quartz after touching, these marks may fade or never disappear.
- The quartz may become susceptible to discolouration due to strong UV rays/prolonged sun exposure.
- Acidic disinfectants and cleaners, alcohol based cleaners, and especially dishwasher soap will deteriorate the quartz and eventually etch, creating permanent white marks on your quartz.
- Using cleaning products not recommended for engineered quartz can result in a “haze/hazy” look on the countertop that will possibly not come off and will be noticeable in natural and artificial lighting
- Engineered quartz can become etched faster in more frequently cleaned areas (such as around sinks/stoves etc)
- Black/dark solid coloured quartz is made with resins and natural quartz, these two materials do not polish exactly the same, therefore, the slab might not be 100% visually consistent in natural and artificial light.
- Engineered quartz is stain-resistant, not stain-proof
